l'instabilité caractérisée par le changement de pente du gradient de température, mais progressivement jusqu'à aboutir à la forme finale.

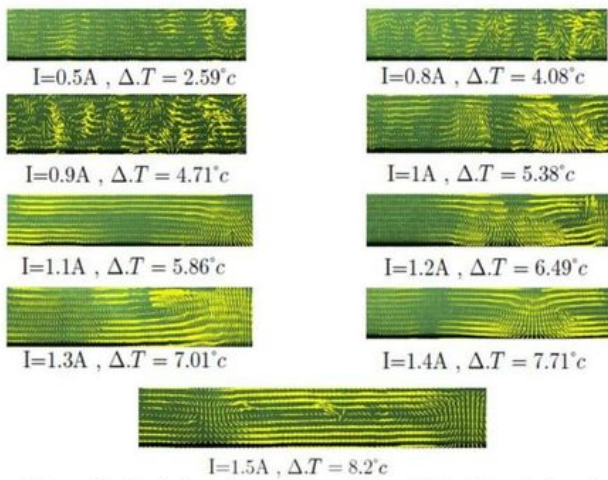

Figure 8 : Evolution des rouleaux de Rayleigh-Bénard dans le Carbopol 980 (0.05 wt%) en fonction de la puissance injectée.

5. Conclusion et perspectives

Alors que la bibliographie indiquait que la contrainte seuil empêche le développement de l'instabilité de Rayleigh-Bénard [8], les résultats expérimentaux mettent évidence l'apparition du mode convectif et que le phénomène est réversible en aller retour, et cela pour différentes concentrations de fluide. L'étape suivante va être de mesurer les champs de température dans le volume par utilisation de cristaux liquides, et aussi de regarder plus finement l'interaction entre le modèle rhéologique le plus pertinent et les gradients de vitesse présents dans la cavité. L'effet du glissement à la paroi sera aussi abordé.

Remerciements

Ces travaux ont bénéficié d'un financement dans le cadre de l'ANR blanche ThIM. Les auteurs souhaitent remercier Christophe Le Bozec pour le travail réalisé lors de la mise en route du dispositif expérimental.

Experimental study of the Rayleigh-Bénard convection in a yield stress fluid

Abstract

An experimental investigation of the Rayleigh-Bénard convection in a yield stress fluid by combined local visualization of the flow fields and integral temperature measurements is presented. First, the experimental system and the measuring techniques are validated by conducting experiments with a Newtonian fluid (Glycerin). The classical continuous imperfect bifurcation to convective states is confirmed (Fig.6) and the critical Rayleigh number is found in a fair agreement with both theoretical prediction and previous experimental studies. Similar measurements were performed for Carbopol solutions at various concentrations (various yield stresses). For each of these yield stress fluids an imperfect bifurcation to convective states is found. As the rheological behaviour of the solutions is highly nonlinear and irreversible upon increasing/decreasing applied stresses this result is somewhat surprising. In spite of rheological nonlinearity and irreversibility of deformation states illustrated in Fig. 2 the reversibility of the bifurcation towards convective states in a Carbopol gel is preserved (Fig. 7). Future theoretical and numerical developments able to rationalise our experimental findings are needed. What is clear for now, however, is that Rayleigh-Bénard stability problem with elasto-viscoplastic fluids should be tackled via non-linear methods and, perhaps, a more sophisticated rheological picture of the solid-fluid transition in a yield stress fluid should be employed.
